Everything was fine till the finance guy steps in. I'm a believer in Extended Warranties so I guess that made me an easy target.. First thing I let him know is I have no interest in the paint protection. This gave the "expert in deception" heads up to know how to proceed. He concentrate's on the MPP third party-not Toyota Maintenance Plan which they have precisely packaged on a paper to include a "club" add on that will protect you from key loss, windshield damage, dings and tire repairs.. For only 3 years.. I only found this cost breakdown later after the deal was signed - I know.. When I ask him about the cost of this Extended Warranty prior to the many paper to be signed he says wait till we see what finance rate I can get for you.. When I see the offer from his "manager" on my best interest rate and he throws in a rather odd 66 month payoff schedule I feel ready to sign. I will accept any insults thrown at me now.. My bad. BUT when I did discover the ZAKTEK paint on the itemized paper I returned to let them know - I did not want that and it was not on the car you could feel there was nothing on the fresh paint, and they did not have time to get it done. They informed me that it must include all three items - no way to get just one or the other. In fact you can get your money back on any one EXCEPT the paint protection which I did - of course But Although I am still waiting for that money to hit my Toyota Finance account I have been wondering if they really can force customers to take all three. That is the phone call I am waiting for. Lastly Buyer Beware! And be advised they WILL lie to you and feel no pressure from any other Toyota Corporate entity to return your calls and work with you when confronted with a complaint. Recent Arrival! Showing 1 - 18 out of 8, listings. Overall Consumer Rating. Addictive acceleration and grip. The car is amazing. Plenty of power almost instantly on tap and the grip is incredible. The steering is very sharp and precise. This car demands respect. I love the Sport Plus mode where the exhaust backfires. Sounds like a Porsche. I use the Sport Individual mode where I can tune the steering, engine and transmission to what I like. The Mi has M adaptive suspension, transmission and brakes. The braking is so important especially on this car. I have all the options except AWD and the optional rear tires. I find the ADAS features overwhelming and actually annoying. The lane departure system is annoying and the car will try to steer you back into your lane if it feels you made a lane change too quickly. And the ADAS is always on when you turn the engine on, so you have to turn it off when you start the car by pressing a button in the dashboard. The remote access is very convenient as it unlocks the car and unfolds it the mirrors when you approach the car. The Automated Parking feature needs to be improved as I tried it once and if I had not paid attention it would have backed into a garbage bin. The seats are very supportive. They should make the steering wheel and headrests also adjustable via switches. Right now they are manual. There are plenty of cup holders which is great, also in the doors, and 3 USB ports and wireless charging. The rear legroom is obviously less than a 5 series but still decent and you get an armrest with cup holders. The headroom is pretty good and the trunk space is quite large. This car is so fast that you definitely need to learn how to drive it and respect it. The Mi will always put a smile on your face. Read more. Read less. Learn more about the BMW 3 Series. The used BMW 3 Series received an average score of 4. Where to buy a used BMW 3 Series?
